Is O'Daniel A Klansman?

In the current issue of Ken magazine, Philip E. Fox, an ex-murderer who was a high leader of the Ku Klux Klan in its heyday, is described as "one of the acting gnomes who elected W. Lee O'Daniel as the hillbilli-band governor of the largest state in the union." Ken predicts a renewal of klan activity this spring and quotes Imperial Wizard Evans to the effect that "The Klan has more Governors now than it ever had."

were strangely silent last week and stark reality stared while popular "man of the hour" in the face.

The Governor's 30-day reprieve to Winzell Williams, convicted Dallas murderer, brought a torrent of criticism from the press, radio, pulpit and every conceivable avenue of expression, not because of the stay of execution itself, but the apparent motive actuating the executive's decision. Governor O'Daniel, as quoted by the daily press, stated that the doomed man "would suffer the dreadful punishment of certain death staring him in the face for thirty days." This seemed, to his way of thinking, the worst form of punishment to be meted out to the culprit.

BRANDS STATEMENT AS "MOST INHUMAN THOUGHT"

Representative J. E. Winfree, of Houston, chairman of the committee on penitentiaries, read the Governor's words on granting the reprieve, and, according to the press, said: "That statement is the most heinous, most foul and most inhuman thought that ever emanated from the brain of man in this State in the last two decades, and I resent it." Representative Winfree is reported to have prefaced his castigation with the remark that he had read in history of despots of Rome who put people to death in the arena in order to see them suffer, and that he made his answer to the Governor as "a friend of the 7,000 forgotten men in the penitentiary."

The attack on Governor O'Daniel is bitter and some of the statements are:

ELPASO HERALD: "Texas stands abused before the world. Texas begs forgiveness for the act of its servant."

FORT WORTH PRESS: "We feel sorry for O'Daniel. Not for thirty days, but for all his days and all his nights this thing will come to haunt him."

The Rev. Wayne Buchanan, Episcopalian, Houston: "My personal reaction is one of disgust."

District Judge Norman Atkinson: "I cannot credit my ears or eyes."

Winzell, the unwitting cause of it all, says: "In spite of what Mr. O'Daniel said, I am doing all right." Williams seems to appreciate the additional time in which to "get ready" for death.

RACE LEADERS BITTEN IN CONDEMNATION

Negro leaders when interviewed on the Governor's statement, were outspoken in condemnation. A few of the statements follow:
